As a result, we observed that the most consistent method across all atmospheric conditions was the use of a 100% relative humidity. However, this was not always the best choice for the estimation of T_{air} and T_{wet} for the given conditions. The best choice was dependent on the atmospheric conditions. For example, in Figure 3, the 100% relative humidity method did not provide the best estimates of T_{air} and T_{wet} for the given conditions. The best method was the 100% relative humidity method for the given conditions.

As a result of the above, the following conclusions can be drawn. The first is that the use of the in vitro model of the human eye is a useful tool for the study of the effects of chemical agents on the eye. The second is that the use of the in vitro model of the human eye is a useful tool for the study of the effects of chemical agents on the eye. SB 974 Opposition Update

June 22, 2010

Assembly Jobs, Economic Development and the Economy
1120 N Street, Room 360
Sacramento, CA 95834

At: SB 974 (Steinberg) OP-306

To: Assembly Jobs, Economic Development and the Economy Committee

OP-306 SB 974 (Steinberg), which would effectively gut the California Enterprise Zone (EZ) program, is being opposed.

SB 974 proposes to create a "career tax credit" in an effort to bolster career technical education efforts in this state. However, this new tax credit is "paid for" by eliminating key provisions of California's successful Enterprise Zone Program. Two specific provisions of the EZ Program would be eliminated if SB 974 were enacted. The EZ Program provides important benefits to businesses that invest in a targeted California's most economically distressed areas and provide job to disadvantaged individuals.

First, SB 974 would eliminate the Targeted Employment Area (TEA) from the list of eligible areas for the EZ hiring tax credit. As such, the definition of the individuals from whom a tax incentive or incentives will be automatically high levels of unemployment and poverty would be eliminated. Because a large number of hiring credit vouchers are issued under the TEA criterion, the practical effect of this provision will be to eliminate the majority of the benefit of the EZ Program. The TEA criterion is appropriate because it focuses on hiring individuals who live in the most economically distressed areas and are seeking an employment wage in this area.

Second, SB 974 would require a company to use a certification (also known as voucher) to be exempted within 21 days of an individual being hired. There are detailed statutes and regulations promulgated by SCD which provide specific documentation standards and other requirements for obtaining vouchers under the targeted employment criteria. This provision is an arbitrary and capricious deadline that will preclude most employers, particularly small businesses, from claiming the EZ hiring tax credits to which they are otherwise lawfully entitled. The practical effect of this provision is to eliminate "retroactive certification" and instead impose an unreasonable burden on businesses to obtain vouchers to be eligible for the incentive.

California's EZ program is vital to California's economy and economic recovery. For these and other reasons, I strongly oppose SB 974 and urge your "NO" vote.

Sincerely,

INFORMATION: Aug 31 INVITE Smart Schools for Sustainable Communities

TO: CALCOG EXECUTIVE DIRECTORS
FROM: JERRY JEFFE

Dear Colleague:

On August 31, 2010, in Sacramento, the California Strategic Growth Council (SGC) will host our first policy roundtable: Smart Schools for Sustainable Communities: Aligning Sustainable Communities Planning and Public Education in California, in Sacramento. One of the statutory objectives of the SGC is to recommend policies and investment strategies and priorities to the Governor, the Legislature and other state agencies. We as Californians highly value education and invest billions of dollars in constructing and operating our schools. Community quality and schools are intricately connected and greatly impact our children's future. Yet, we have not thought strategically how we can connect our investment in building schools to leverage state goals in other areas including improving the quality of our communities, the environment, and the health of our children. I hope that you can join me for an interactive dialogue with state wide decision makers that I know will be engaging and informative.

Date: August 31, 2010

Time: 1-5pm

Location: Health Professions High School, 451 McClatchy Way, Sacramento, CA 95818 (Map/Directions here)

GOALS

The overall goal of this half-day meeting is to bring together statewide leaders in education, planning, and policy to discuss promising strategies for connecting schools to the creation of healthy, sustainable communities in California. Our three key objectives include:

1. Learn about the federal Housing and Sustainable Communities programs and their connections to education

2. Identify key opportunities to better link schools to the creation of sustainable communities in California, including

- integrating schools into regional Sustainable Communities Strategies and local planning activities
- school siting, design, and green construction policies
- linking school curriculum and sustainable communities

3. Suggest policy strategies to leverage opportunities for improving educational experiences and realizing sustainable communities

BACKGROUND

California has been making tremendous financial and policy investments in improving educational quality and in making our cities and regions more livable and economically sound. Although schools and community quality are intricately connected, rarely do we think about linking policies across these sectors. This forum begins a conversation of doing so, building on recent statewide activities including the Senate Bill 375, Federal Sustainable Housing and Communities Program, Senate Select Committee on School Facilities, and the California Department of Education's new vision and guiding principles for school facilities that enhance achievement for all students.

This invitational state policy roundtable brings together the work of state, regional, and local agencies in the planning of sustainable communities and presents a unique opportunity to leverage California's ongoing investments in educational innovations and school facilities. As state policy leaders and local communities work towards creating more economically resilient, vibrant, and sustainable communities, young people, and schools can, and should, play important roles.

The event is a collaboration between the Strategic Growth Council, California Department of Education (CDE), UC Berkeley's Center for Cities & Schools, and other partnering state agencies.

This meeting will be limited in size to ensure that we have time and space to dialog and learn from one another. If you are able to join us, please RSVP to Anna Marie Young (annamarie.young@opr.ca.gov) by August 25, 2010.

An event description and tentative agenda are attached.

I hope to see you on August 31st,

Heather Fargo

Fresno, CA (July 22, 2010) -

California Consulting, LLC, a Fresno based grant writing and advocacy firm, has launched an expansion of their grant writing division by adding three senior staff members after attracting several new clients. With the expansion, the firm now ranks as one of the largest and fastest growing grant writing companies in the state. California Consulting was founded in 2004 and currently has contracts with more than 50 clients across California. Its clients include 23 cities, 16 school districts, two county governments, two Council of Governments (COGs), and some of the state's most respected private for-profit and non-profit entities. "California Consulting has delivered for their clients," said Fresno City Council Member Blong Xiong. California Consulting has earned a reputation as a high quality and highly regarded grant writing and governmental affairs firm."

The new staff members are Chief Operating Officer Juan Garza II, Senior Associate James Ritchie, Ph.D., and Senior Grants Advisor Antoinette Aizon-Hubbell. Salinas Valley innovation hub designation sought

An application to make the Salinas Valley an innovation hub has been submitted to the governor's Office of Economic Development.

The idea is to create "a network that represents a common goal" of bringing innovation and jobs to the area, said Abby Taylor-Silva, vice president of policy and communications for the Grower-Shipper Association of Central California, lead agency for the application.

Encouraging agricultural research has long been a theme of Salinas Mayor Dennis Donohue.

Monterey County is one of eight applicants for the second round of designations, Taylor-Silva said. She doesn't know how many will be selected.

Six areas were designated what the state calls iHubs earlier this year: Sacramento, Rohnert Park, Livermore Valley, San Francisco, Palm Springs, Orange County and San Diego.

There is no money involved in the designation, but it could gain recognition for the area and might help if grants become available later, Taylor-Silva said.

Among the backers of the application are the University of California, CSU Monterey Bay, Hartnell College, the city of Salinas, the county, the Salinas Valley Chamber of Commerce, Small Business Development Center, CHISPA affordable housing agency, and the Agriculture and Land-Based Training Association.

It hasn't been decided what type of innovation companies to seek for the iHub, but food safety and water conservation are key issues now, Taylor-Silva said.

"The Salinas Valley has a history of innovation," she said, including machines for packing broccoli in the field, lettuce loading machines, and advances in drip irrigation.

Important Education Update August 6, 2010

Stephen Rhoads has provided the following information as well as the very helpful attachments. Please review and let me know if you have any questions. Thanks. Steve /Childcare./ The Conference Committee rejected the Governor's cost reduction proposals in child care and instead adopted a 5 percent Reserve Cap on Child Care Providers (language below). They also adopted Budget Bill language requiring the Department of Education to submit a report by April 15, 2011 to the chair of the Joint Legislative Budget Committee and the Director of Finance on improper payments in childcare programs and conclusions drawn from the investigation of those improper payments.

Budget Bill Language

1. Notwithstanding Section 8450 of the California Education Code, for contracts issued pursuant to Education Code Sections 8230, 8235, 8240 and 8250, the Superintendent shall offset the 2010-11 apportionments with funds maintained in a contractor's Center-based reserve account within the child development fund as of June 30, 2010. The offset of apportionments shall continue until such time that the reserve account balance is five percent of the sum of the contract maximum reimbursable amount(s) contributing to the Center-based reserve account.

2. The State Department of Education (SDE) shall conduct quarterly analyses of fiscal and attendance reports for fiscal year 2010-11 and may adjust contract maximum reimbursable amounts due to the under utilization of funds in the contracts issued pursuant to Education Code Sections 8230, 8235, 8240, and 8250. California Education Code, Sections 8400-8409 and California Code of Regulations, title 5, Section 18301, are not applicable to the contract adjustments specified in this paragraph.

T railer Bill Language

Addition to Education Code Section 8450

Notwithstanding subdivisions (a) and (b), effective July 1, 2011 a contractor may retain a reserve fund balance equal to 5 percent of the sum of the maximum reimbursable amounts of all contracts to which the contractor is a party, or two thousand dollars ($2,000), whichever is greater. This subdivision does not apply to resource and referral programs or to alternative payment model and certificate child care contracts.
